

Date	Medium	Comment
8/2/2026	Website	A separated bicycling and walking path across the Chesapeake Bay Bridge is a must have. This is a once in a lifetime opportunity to add an amazing feature to the bridge and connect trails on both sides! We can't miss this opportunity and deserve this!
8/25/2026	Email	Hi Heather, I'm a member of the Anne Arundel County Bicycle Advisory Commission and wanted to check in on the current status of the proposed bicycle and pedestrian shared-use path as part of the Chesapeake Bay Crossing project. My understanding is that the shared-use path remains under consideration as an optional component of the recommended alternative rather than a committed part of the project. With the Broadneck Peninsula Trail now open on the western side of the Bay and the existing trail network on Kent Island on the eastern side, a shared-use path across the new bridge could create a major regional bicycle and pedestrian connection. Could you let me know: Is the shared-use path still actively under consideration? When do you expect a decision to be made on whether it will be included? What factors are still being evaluated? Is there a current concept for how it would connect to the Broadneck Peninsula Trail/Sandy Point on the western side and the Kent Island trail network on the eastern side? Is there anything the Anne Arundel County Bicycle Advisory Commission or local governments can do at this stage to support inclusion of the path? I'm particularly interested in making sure the shared-use path is incorporated before final design advances, rather than becoming something that would need to be added later. Thank you for any update you can provide. Best, [Name Redacted]